Tick Borne Illnesses and Prevention:

In Minnesota, there are about a dozen different types of ticks. Not all of them spread disease but it is always best to protect yourself against tick bites. The most common ticks that people come across in Minnesota are the American dog tick (commonly known as the wood tick) and the blacklegged tick (commonly known as the deer tick). The blacklegged tick causes by far the most tickborne diseases in Minnesota. The diseases spread by ticks in Minnesota include:

Lyme Disease, Anaplasmosis, Babesiosis, Ehrlichiosis, Powassan Virus Disease, Borrelia miyamotoi Disease, Borrelia mayonii Disease, Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever (RMSF).

Be aware of ticks

Blacklegged ticks (deer ticks) are found in wooded or brushy areas while American dog ticks (wood ticks) are found in grassy, more open habitat and woods.

American dog ticks are found throughout Minnesota while blacklegged ticks have been found throughout most of the wooded parts of the state.

You should know whether the areas where you live, work, or play have blacklegged ticks.

While ticks may be active whenever it is warm outside (i.e., above freezing with little to no snow cover), be aware of when ticks are most active here in Minnesota so you can be extra diligent during these months:

Blacklegged tick adults are most active in the spring and fall

Blacklegged tick nymphs (immature ticks) are most active from mid-May through mid-July

American dog tick adults are most active in the spring and early summer

Use tick repellent

Choose an EPA-registered product so you know it is safe and effective against tick bites.

Products containing permethrin, which are used on clothing and gear, are especially recommended for people who spend a lot of time in wooded areas.

Do not use permethrin on your skin.

Standard DEET-based products are another option.

Use a product containing no more than 30 percent DEET for adults.

Concentrations up to 30 percent DEET are also safe for children (according to reports from the American Academy of Pediatrics). Do not use DEET for infants under two months of age.

Products containing DEET or permethrin will also protect you from mosquito bites and mosquito-borne diseases.

Follow the manufacturer's directions for all repellent applications.

Check frequently for ticks – at least once a day.

Ticks must remain attached for one to two days before they can transmit the Lyme disease bacteria.

Some research suggests that anaplasmosis may be transmitted more quickly.

Bathe or shower after coming indoors to wash off and more easily find ticks that may be crawling on or attached to you.

Search your entire body closely, especially hard-to-see areas (e.g. behind knees, groin area, and arm pits).

Ticks may look like a speck of dirt or freckle on skin so use a parent or a mirror to help you.

If you find a tick on yourself, remove the tick as soon as possible.

Prompt tick removal is important in order to lower your risk of tick borne disease transmission.

Use a pair of tweezers or your fingers to grasp the tick by the head, close to the skin.

Pull the tick outward slowly, gently, and steadily

Clean the area with soap and water.

Avoid folk remedies like Vaseline®, nail polish remover or burning matches - they are not a safe or effective way to remove ticks.
